What Is Hyaluronic Acid Filler?

Hyaluronic acid is a type of sugar that is found naturally within the body, including skin, connective tissue and joints. Among its many biological functions, it plays an important role in tissue hydration, joint lubrication, immune response and tissue repair. In the skin, it is a major component of the natural skin barrier. Hyaluronic acid is used as a nonpermanent soft tissue filler. Its unique physical properties, such as its large water-binding capacity, along with its established track record of effectiveness and safety make it a popular choice as a dermal filler. Due to its molecular structure, hyaluronic acid dissolves over time and is excreted through the body.

How Does Hyaluronic Acid Filler Work?

This acid is a humectant, which means it can hold moisture: It can bind up to 1,000 times its volume in water. This makes it a compelling treatment as a dermal filler due to its ability to pull in and retain water, enhancing the volumizing effect while also adding hydration. Hyaluronic acid fillers are injected into the skin through a needle or cannula to restore lost volume, smooth wrinkles and fine lines, and add volume and plumpness. Effects are visible immediately after the treatment.

How Long Does Hyaluronic Acid Fillers Last?

When used to correct lines, wrinkles and depressions in the face, hyaluronic acid fillers last between 12 and 18 months, on average. When large volumes are injected for cheek augmentation or jawline sculpting, results can last up to 24 months. Conversely, lip augmentation using fillers
