Product Description

Ozempic works in several ways to lower blood sugar levels in people with type 2 diabetes. The drug also lowers heart-related risks in people with both diabetes and heart disease.

The drug does this in the following ways:

Ozempic mimics the actions of a naturally produced hormone called GLP-1. By activating GLP-1 receptors in your brain, Ozempic helps stimulate the pancreas to release insulin.

Similar to the GLP-1 hormone, Ozempic slows the movement of food through your stomach. This causes you to feel full for longer periods of time. In turn, it prevents a big increase in your blood sugar levels and can lead to fewer hunger cravings. It increases the amount of insulin your body makes after a meal so that your blood sugar levels won't get too high. Insulin is a hormone that lowers your blood sugar levels.

It lowers the amount of sugar released into your bloodstream.

Your doctor or a pharmacist can provide details about how Ozempic works in the body.
