The Science Behind Restylane Fillers

Restylane is composed of hyaluronic acid, a substance that naturally occurs within our bodies. This synthetic version is molecularly similar to the body's own HA but is chemically cross-linked to delay breakdown by skin enzymes. The result is a long-lasting gel that attracts and binds water molecules to maintain volume and smooth and firm the skin.

Depending on the specific formulation, Restylane fillers may also feature NASHA® or XpresHAn Technology™. These patented technologies create a more pronounced lift and allow for flexible, natural expressions, respectively.
